THE LAST BEST WEST

An Exploration of Myth,
Identity, and Quality of Life
in Western Canada

Edited by Anne Gagnon,
W.F. Garrett-Petts,
James Hoffman et al.

There is something quintessentially “Western Canadian” that distinguishes and separates living in this region from all other Canadian regions. But what does it mean to be “Western Canadian”? What meanings do the terms “the West” and being a “Westerner” invoke?

To answer these questions, The Last Best West lays out the variety of approaches and unique research initiatives, with a novel focus on the following:

- small urban centres
- rural education
- regional representations and identities
- theatre
- literature and film
- visual representations, and
- quality of life issues
