General Rules

- Cite your sources in parentheses within the text of your paper.
- All works referred to within your paper must also appear in the list of Works Cited at the end of your paper.
- Double-space your entire paper, including the Works Cited list.
- Each entry begins flush with the left margin of the page, and subsequent lines are indented. This is known as hanging indentation.
- Capitalize each word in a title, except for articles such as A, An, or The, unless they are the first word in the title.
- Titles of books, journals and government documents are italicized.
- Titles of book chapters, journal, magazine, and newspaper articles are put in "quotation marks".
- Use the author's full first and last name when it is known. E.g. Smith, Bob.
- Arrange entries alphabetically by the last name of the first author or by title if there is no author. When beginning with the title ignore initial articles (e.g. A, An, The) for alphabetization.
- Multiple entries by one author are arranged chronologically.
- MLA no longer requires you to include the URL when citing online material. Include a URL only if you have been instructed to do so or if the document would be difficult to locate otherwise.
- All citations must include an indication of the medium of the source (e.g. "Print" or "Web").

Indirect Sources

Sometimes an author writes about work that someone else has done, but you are unable to track down the original source. In this case, because you did not read the original work, you will include only the source you did consult in the Works Cited list.

The abbreviation "qtd." in the parenthetical reference indicates you have not read the original research.

In-text Citation:

Fong's 1987 study found that older students' memory can be as good as that of young people, but this depends on how memory is tested (qtd. in Bertram 124).

Reference List:

Cite only the source you actually consulted: do not include Fong (1987) in Works Cited, do include Bertram.
