

ENGLISH

TRU English students can experience both the depth and breadth of literature and writing in English, from Medieval to Postmodern, Canadian to African, children's books to Indigenous drama. While engaging the imagination and probing the human condition, English studies also encourage students to develop complex reading, writing, and thinking skills, all of which are essential in the Information Age.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR STUDENTS

Through the Writing Centre and various research projects, the department of English has employed students in editing, researching and tutoring.

The Department also sponsors informal groups devoted to reading and writing:

- TRU Fiction, TRU's creative writing group
- Hosts novel/poem readings and lectures

CAREERS FOR GRADUATES

- Education
- Writing
- Editing
- Publishing
- Library
- Counselling
- Management
- Information Services
- Arts Administration
- Government
- Social work
- The ministry

Because our courses focus on reading, writing, thinking, and imagining, English studies form natural interdisciplinary links with a variety of other areas, including history, law, journalism, sociology, and psychology.
